PART IL-CHAPTER XL.

"You were very nice to come tonight, Harry."
Muriel Lannard, having daintily lighted a cigaret, handed it to Rasher and then lighted one for herself. She leaned luxuriously back in a deep chair, with knoes crossed and a trim little gold slipper flashing as she swung it lazily to and fro. "Particularly," she added, "as you had no intention

He smiled. "Frankly, I didn't intend to come," he admitted. "You didn't want to see me?" Her slipper paused

"I didn't say that," answered Rasher in a low voice.
The slipper resumed its rhythmic course. Evidently she found something not displeasing in his remark, for a faint smile of understanding touched her lips. its wisp of curling smoke and then turned her eyes

He was silent. The memory of yesterday was vivid. It was the only time she had ever kissed him. She had called it a good-by kiss to a dear friend, but she meant it for something else.

"Have you?" she asked softly.

"Have you thought of me," she hesitated, "at all since yesterday?"

"Have you?" she asked softly.

"You must know I have." His voice was a trifle unsteady.

"And what did you think?—that I was a bold and forward person, of course." Her eyes sparkled. "Really, you know, Harry, that I'm a very dangerous person to one of your high and noble standards. I'm quite likely at any moment to shock you dreadfully. I'm not to be trusted—a-tall."

He laughed awkwardly.

"You seem to think I'm entirely to be trusted," he challenged.

- MUTCHEON-

"O, absolutely. I'd trust myself on a desert island Her slipper was now swinging faster and in her eyes was a mischlevous glint as she noted his flush of resentment. The intimation that he is "slow" is one which few men can hear without a protest from his "Of course, Harry, I don't expect to be cast away upon a desert island, but if I ever am and I need a

Her face suddenly changed. "Forgive me, Harry. I mustn't tease you. You know I admire you immensely. I think you are quite wonderful and I know your thoughts are above all my poor little feminine frivolities."

"On the contrary." he protested warmly, "I am—well, quite intensely interested in what you call your feminine frivolities."

"I don't believe it for an instant." She arose

"I don't believe it for an instant." She arose quickly and placed her hands over his eyes. "Just to prove it, I'll wager anything you can't even describe what I'm wearing."

Rasher's senses were swimming. The contact of her soft, firm haids was like an electric shock. He gripped the arms of his chair and strove desperately to retain his self-control. His face was burning. It was a moment when a man may easily lose his head though not his heart.

He seized her hands and looked up into the eyes above as her head leaned over him and the tendrils of her hair brushed his cheek. As if compelled by a hypnotic lure, has face slowly inverse and she kinsed him.

At this moment the door opened and there, frozen in an attitude of amazement, stood Mrs. Lannard. For a moment no one spoke.

"Well," exclaimed the resourceful lady, "it seems as though I am to offer my congratulations."

Quaint and sturdy as the famous old Plymouth sailing ships

Furniture of imagination and charm

LONG ago the Plymouth ship-wrights used to make cupboards and tables for the homes of the sea captains. The same skill with which they built the fleetest ships in the world was used in the Plymouth Cupboards—and the disigns show quaint, slanting tops and panelling like a slip's cabin.

The table is the draw-top refectory type, seating six closed and ten open. The side table is a rare design of 1680. The chairs have beautiful turnings and the quaint mushroom arms that collectors prize. The wood is maple, righly toned like old amber, and decorations of a packet-ship on each arm chair give a note of individuality that means real charm.

THE PLIGHT OF AMERICAN LIBERTY.

Senator James Cousens of Michigan says that prohibition may bring about a revolution in the United States. He'll be abused or laughed at, but It is not an absurd statement. Prohibition was the beginning on a grand scale of interference by the federal government in the lives and habits of the people. It subjected citizens to espionage, search good to it, other groups will seek the same authority. When a government commits itself to a policy of regulating personal habit it does not set a limit to such regulation.

Mr. Couzens says that people would not start a revolution merely to get beer, but they may rebel against a government policy of repression when that doctrine has gone on a few more logical steps. The American people sought their freedom from autocracy and denounced as a tyrant a Brit ish king who was not subjecting them to one-tently the deprivation of individual rights that their own government now imposes on them.

This interference is detested by people who find an intolerable infringement of American freedom. ion of last November and the Minnesota bye-lon has increased that instability. They leave out of consideration the great majority whose use of alcohol never, before prohibition, made them lawbreakers or disturbers of the peace. The freedom of a majority cannot safely be measured by the requirements of weak-lings. Some citizens make an incontestably bad use of the voting privilege, and some of them do it with vicious intent; to the injury of whole comnunities. The logic of prohibition would be to dis-

T a conference of swimming instructors held by the Red Cross at Lake Geneva, the difference between the sensitiveness of the skins of different individuals was very noticeable. A few minutes of exposure caused the biondes, more trouble than was, given the brunettes by an hour. An old veteran, Dr. Brown of Kansas City, told me that he slways greased himself well before putting on his swimming togs. The skin of the face, shoulders, arms, and legs will not blister or burn if it is well greased before being exposed. I am inclined to think hennaising the skin does good.

Treat sunburns by applying cloths wrung out in soda water. If the skin is very much irritated, use a sterilized mixture of equal parts oil and lime water.

HEAT STROKE. If the case is a genuine case of heat stroke the indications are to bring down the temperature. To do this use an ice water bath and rub the body with ice until the rectal temperature falls. Then wrap in warm coverings. It may be advisable to keep ice on the head after the body has been wrapped. The rectal temperature should decide the time the bath is to be continued and whether ice is to be used on the head. THE 1ST MINNESOTA.

Oak Park, Ill., July 24.—In your issue of July 23 appears an account of the meeting at Stillwater, Minn., of three survivors of Company B, lat Minnssota infantry, these three, with one other living, being the last of the comrades who have met every year on the anniversary of the battle of Bull Run.

The 1st Minnesota infantry means little to those of today. And yet read what these three old men, now in their feighties, went through sixty years ago when they were in their twenties. I quote from Beecham's "Gettysburg":

"At a critical moment when the tempest of battle was raging in its fury over and around the wheat field; when the confederates had broken through Caldwell's lines, and Wright's brigade was advancing toward the crest of Cemetery ridge; in order to gain the necessary time to interpose a brigade from Syker oncoming corps Gen. Hancock ordered a single regiment—the 1st Minnesota, which was the only one obtainable—to charge in and delay the advancing for. The regiment advanced with 356 men in line, meeting a brigade of the enemy and losing within the space of fifteen minutes 225 in killed and wounded, or 85 per cent of their whole number; but they checked the confederate advance and held their ground against them until Hancock was enabled to supply reinforcements.

Proof of Good Judgment

Proof of this good judgment in choosing the Plain Dealer alone is the result of a constantly growing appreciation of this great market of Cleveland and Northern Ohio.

Some of the vital points that confirm this sound judgment are that jobbers and retailers look upon the Plain Dealer as their great sales help; that this newspaper covers Cleveland and the Northern Ohio Market adequately; that the present daily circulation exceeds 200,000 and that of the Sunday

Plain Dealer is more than 230,000 proving that Plain Dealer readers prefer it as their home newspaper.

In the end it is economy to choose the Plain Dealer alone because of its low rate per line per thousand circulation, That's good judgment, too.

Sells Any-Priced Merchandise

The selling price of merchandise is never a factor in choosing the Plain Dealer alone Any type of investigation or analysis will

For example, among 1505 local advertisers representing the fifteen major classifications, and including such as Foods, Household and Electrical Appliances, Women's Specialty Shops, Furniture and others, more than one third, or 541, depended upon the Plain Dealer alone during 1922.

No other Cleveland newspaper is so widely chosen.

These Men Know This Big Market

By their thorough study of Cleveland and the Northern Ohio Market, these careful buyers of newspaper advertising know which newspaper to choose. They have supplanted estimates and opinions with cold

They have gone into such cities as Ashtabula, Akron, Kent, Lorain, Wooster, Mansfield, Sandusky and scores of other towns to determine their possibilities. They were not surprised that the Plain Dealer proved to be their one best newspaper. But they were convinced beyond any doubt.

Their facts have been so clearly expressive of the Plain Dealer's great influence that they could make no mistake in choosing this one newspaper alone.

For the first five months of 1923 there are 537 national advertisers who believe and say-the Plain Dealer is enough.

Martin rallied. Flercely, he was cursing himself for having put the detection to this free-lance investigation. Why couldn't he have let it alone? anger steadled him.

"How do I stand, then, Segrove?"

"Well, you're wasting money if you have me in on this hunt. The police working hard already. Bedford's got the case in hand—he's a good chap I very keen. He went into it pretty thoroughly with me when he found stumbled on another clew. It seems——"

But look here," cut in Martin, "how and when did the police get Murlow's finger-prints?"

"But look here, cut in a comparison of the lift cage in Montore's house. Thurlow did monkey its with the lift, you know."

Martin was will striggling with a genuine bewilderment.

"But—but—bow do they know the finger prints are Thurlow's? Why not butler's—or even the—the dead man's own?"

"Because they've faken those already," retorted Segrove, somewhat netlat Martin's incredulity, "also the finger prints on the lift correspond with me in another record of theirs. The record of a burglary."

sidered Thurlow in the light of an established criminal. . . . Was it a big haul?"

"On the contrary, it was a very minor affair at a semi-detached villa in Finchley. Burglary and assault on an elderly lady, by name Mrs. Skiddy." Martin half rose, then sank back again in his chair.

"Skiddy." he repeated.

"Good name, isn't it? Mrs. Skiddy was found tied to her chair and about nine pounds in notes was missing—"

"Do you happen to remember the exact address, Segrove?"

"Tes. Number eleven, Pagonia Villas. Why?"

It had more than once been Martin's experience that, when a violent attack was made upon his reason, his subconscious self leaped into the fray and kept guard while he won back to self-control. So now, while mind and brain reeled under the latest jest of fate, he heard himself answer Segrove's question with a nonchalance that amounted to genius.

"An ancient retainer of our illustrious family is called Skiddy. She knew my cousin and myself as infants—a dear old soul—and it was rather a shock to heer of her being tied to a chair. But I see it isn't the same Skiddy."

Segrove made no response. He lay back in his chair, crossing his legs with precision, his face expressionless. Martin found it impossible to gather the detective's attitude to the hastily devised evasion.

"Bedford will probably be round to see you early tomorrow morning," said segrove after a pause. "He is naturally rather pleased at the possibility of setting a closer description of Thurlow than Lady Montore and her butler have been able to supply.

"I take it," he added after a second pause, "that you would prefer me to withdraw from the seene of action. You can't get anything more thorough than police investigation, in spite of popular belief to the contrary."

Martin numbled something. Then, pulling himself together, he admitted that it would be best to leave the matter in the hands of Detective-Inspector Bedford. Segrove removed his massive frame from the chair and nodded his farewell.

Bedford. Segrove removed his massive frame from the chair and nodded his fairewell.

Martin watched him leave the room, heard him ross the landing, and clatter out into the court. He heard the receding footsteps die away, become one with the far off mutter of Fleet street. "Ought to have seen him to the door," sid Martin's subconscious self. "Ought to have prevented his seeing that Mrs. Skiddy was a bit of a knockout."

A bit of a knockout. This afternoon Mrs. Skiddy had been taking tea with lacqueline, and Jacqueline had learned something about her which she would not tell Martin, while admitting that perhaps she ought to do so.

'Martin's thought broke abruptly. Another sprang into being.

The finger prints they thought Thurlow's were Julian's—the finger prints on the side of the lift cage and the finger prints found at eleven, Pagonia Villas, when Mrs. Skiddy was robbed of nine pounds! Nine pounds! It was liftened to imagine Julian traveling so far as Finchel to receive nine pounds as a gift. And the finger prints would have one believe that he went to this obscure suburb stealthily and took this modest sum by violence.

That, of course, was absurd. If Julian had taken nine pounds from a woman who might well have been his childhood's nurse, it was as a blind, a cover for the theft of something else. What could Pagonia Villas possibly hold of the slightest value to Julian?

Blackmail had been levied upon Julian, by his own admission, for a considerable period. By a man called Thurlow, whom he had murdered.

Mrs. Skiddy—Thurlow. Thurlow—Mra. Skiddy.

It was like the pendulum of a clock. But the face of the clock had been destroyed, and, although one heard the ticking, one could not tell the time.

Could Jacqueline?

At that final complication Martin flung wide the window through which Julian had climbed, a packed forty-eight hours ago, and iet the warm spring night breezes beat upon his face. He tried to lift the insane puzzle from his thoughts. The police inspector would be upon him tomorrow, and unless he so

Eleven, Pagonia Villas. Lord, the absurdity of the address! He tried to sture it, the house into which Julian had broken, the house from which Mrs. 16dy had come to see Jacqueline—to tell her something. A dingy house, triin decided, set in a dingy street. He wondered whether it would be worth Skiddy had come to see Jacqueline—to tell her something. A dingy house. Martin decided, set in a dingy street. He wondered whether it would be worth having a look at.

The row of undistinguished, semi-detacheds, known as Pagonia Villas, had one advantage, and one only, over Blackthorn terrace on the other side of the road, and that was the strip of southward sloping ground behind them. This strip had been cut up with mathematical exactitude and parcelled out in back gardens. Each little villa had its back garden and each little villa did with it what it listed. In the case of number one to ten the villas listed very little beyond a ragged grass patch fringed with flowering currant bushes, a few wire arches half covered with wistoria, and an occasional rose tree.

The garden of number efeven came as a gasp—a gasp of fragrance and celor. So much beauty was there in this little plot of ground that it appeared far more specious than its neighbors, and a hundred times as sunny. The little lawns were carefully sunk below the level of the earth, so that no drop of moisture should escape them, and they gave forth their thanks in purest smerald. Bordering them, standing shoulder to shoulder in a delicate square. Came the roses, only half aware as yet that summer was near. Beyond the crasy paved paths all the old fashioned flowers rioted together—sweet william, love-in-a-mist, London pride and stock. Sentinel hollyhocks backed them, and against a mellow brick wall a nectarine dreamed of the maturity to come.

While the kindly little mistress of the garden talked to Jacqueline. Countess Montore, about it in Berkely Square, two people walked idly up and down its paths and in and out of its luxuriance.

Booth Tarkington wrote the story, which is said to have been inspired by some of the experiences of himself and Meredith Nicholson when they were kids. He sure knows the combination! of the best acted renditions of Nedda by Elisabeth Rethberg.

It is strange that expression in operatic singing should so often have come to mean the emission of untuneful sounds from the human larynx. Miss Rethberg would seem to have the secret of expressing as wide a range of emotion as any of her sisters in the art, and yet keeping her voice pleasant, singing every note that Leoncavallo wrote in his bloody little opera, and making them all agree.

Strange, too, that more sopranos have not discovered what an enormous effect can be made in the second act of the work by playing the scene on of the work by playing the scene on the stage within the stage in exact rhythm with the orchestra. Yet until Miss Rethberg came along only one other ever found the trick, and she, too, used to sing at Ravinia. Her name is Claudia Muzio. The comparison rightfully implies high praise.

Nearly as high a score is divisit. Nearly as high a score is due to Vicente Ballester. Muskegon, Mich. July 29.—[Special.]—Chicago's only finalists in the Michigan state tennis tournament, Jerry Weber and Jack Harris, fell today as Frederick Bastian and Ralph Burdick of Indianapolis swept to victory in the men's doubles, 6—1, 10—5, 5—7, 6—2. The victors played an alternate lobbying and fast driving game which the Chicagoans could not match. Mrs. A. F. Riese, Saginaw, defeated Mrs. E. C. Johnson, Detreit, 6—1, 6—3, for the women's singles title, while the victor and vanquished combined forces to win the doubles from Mrs. F. J. Loews and Miss Mildred Taylor, Muskegon, 6—1; 5—7, 6—1.

VIOLENT SWING OF MARKETS IS HARD TO FIGURE

The New York Times.

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—It would be a shrewd prophet indeed, whe could base definite conclusions about the future or the rather violent destations which occurred in most makets during the last week. They represented, to some extent at least, the indecisions and inaction of the year's duliest season; to some extent they reflected disappointments and apprehensions over the European tangle. But that the downward swins of prices, particularly on the stock exchange, was a part of its traditional function of indicating business trends later in the year, there was no conclusive evidence.

If does not follow that a summer of tuit and irregular and at times weak prices in the stock market is to be followed by an autumn season in which the self-same condition of duliness and irregularity will rule. This is particularly true when confronted with the circumstances of moderately easy money, high ar loadings, and with fair amounts of my business coming to hand. Rather, it is to be believed that the markets have possibly reached a point where they have fully discounted the seasonal decline in business and in their pause to "catch breath" and determine the future course have been overtaken by professional selling of a determined and aggressive sort, selling designed to "start the ball" of

A picture presented in a review of business industrial, and financial conditions at home and abroad is a multi-colored one. Its lights and its shadows are pronounced and unmistakeble. It is true, ne doubt, that the international situation, particularly as regards Germany, has reached the acutely critical stage, at on the other hand is to be considered the fact that here the banking structure of the country has never been sounder that our industrial system, geared up to wartime production, is only, on the whole, operating which a ratio of approximately 60 per cent of this newly acquired capacity; that railroad car loadings continue to exceed the "million car" figure weakly; that in only one or two isolated lines has there been the semblance of overproduction, and that finally, but probably more important than all, is the final disappearance of all fears, expressed so universally during the sirly part of the year, that the country of the part of the par

Instead of "inflation markets," as feared, the last three months have developed a situation which in reality must be termed a "buyers market." In almost every line, and in practically every commodity, present prices are to a very considerable extent the result of hesitation and apprehension on the part of buyers as a class. It is not too much to say that they now hold the situation is the hollow of their hands.

Empty Shelves Ahead.

One of the most important factors at the moment is that purchases made so hurriedly and so excitedly during the first and half of the second quarter of the year went into consumption very rapidly. Little if any of surplus was built up at that time. It must be considered but a cuestion of time until shelves become empty. Then, doubtless, will be felt the pressure of the ultimate consumer for what he needs from day

Commodity prices, in view of the seasonal duliness and the apathetic attitude of buyers, continue to show a downward trend, with only intermittent hait in the decline, which has been more of less steady for two and one-half months Out of the 235 quotations collected by one trade authority last weak there were 31 changes, of which 50 of them were declines.

Wheat's Status Important.
The situation as to wheat exhibits be little impro-ment from week to wee
The peculiar combination of a large properties crop, an abnormally large carrover, direct competition in the marke of the world by Canada, whose crop whe a record "reaker, fairly good crops Europe, and restricted buying power foreign buyers who usually take up the surplus, have weighed heavily on the wheat market. That present prices well below $1 per bushel—are below to cost of production is hardly a factor the present situation, no matter be for the farmer may had to experimentarion with artificial panaceas for Air relief.

The losses which may be sustained in this direction are offset, in some measure at least, by the profits accruing from corn, which again reached a new high record in the open market is week. The grain decline had a greated to do with the pressure exerted or the northwestern relitrond shures during the last week and sympathetically, a least, on the shares of many other reads. At pressure prices it is doubtful if the grain traffic on the northwestern read is up to normal this autumn. Certainly it will be far below the earlier predictions. Then, too, the buying power of the farmers along the lims is to be takes into consideration. Any restrictions of their buying power are sure to crop it quickly in railroad balance sheets.

The railroads of the country, as whele, however, are in exceptionally good condition, so far as traffic prispects and earning prospects are concerned. The rear's movement of freight this far has never before been equaled in the history of the country, not even

LONDON MARKETS NERVOUS AS RUHR CRISIS CONTINUES

BY ROBERT STEELE.
[Chieses Tributes Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chieses Tribute.]
LONDON, July 29.—[Tribute Radio.]—Nervousness and dejection characterized the London stock market during the last week. The slow progress in the negotiations on reparations got on the nerves of the house and this was aggravated by the serious slump in German marks, which by beating all records centralized attention on impleasant possibilities arising from a breakdown of the German seconomic system. International se-

The meagerness of new business was sarrly explained as being due to the sublic's holiday mood at this time of the year. Considering all factors, however, the markets kept up a fairly firm ront as regards prices, the average lownward movements being unimportant, especially that of glit edged securities, which rallied toward the end of the week. An exception was the Chinese bond market, which showed an all pround market, which showed an all pround markets of ever increasing chaos in Chine.

Make Slight Recovery.

Toward the end of the weak there was feeling that the slump was overdone and prices made a slight recovery. The recovery taken securities were not greatly sliped by the treaty signature, the mancial provisions of which are disked here. The renewed weakness in the Buenos Aires exchange was reflected y Argentine rails, whose traffic returns were poor, Industrials remain slack, the market presenting few features of interest. There has been some demand for Marconis since the postmaster general's announcement of the company's application for a general license covering the whole British empire. Against this the cable companies' shares declined, owing to the severe contractions in their revenue, according to their annual reports.

Home Raits Quiet.

Home rails moved within narrow limits, but the markets were a trifle better at the end of the week. Shipping descriptions were dull, and both insurance and banking shares were uninteresting. Oils suffered a further setback. The market has not yet gotten over the effect of price cuts.

Rubbers were distinctly better under the influence of an improvement in the price of that commodity. The leaders were all in good demand, with many foreign shares also coming to the front. There were but few bright spots in mines during the week, but there was no rush in selling.

New Issues of Securities

Continue at a Low Figure

New York, July 29.—New bond offerings centinus at a low figure last week, the issues totaling only $13,046,000, compared with $10,673,000 in the previous week. In at least one instance no bids were made on an offering of musicipal bonds, investment bankers asserting it was impossible to handle such issues at par or better, with a coupon rate of only 4% per cent.

A break in the lull is found in the announcement of Halsey, Stuart & Co., A. B. Leach & Co., and E. H. Rollins & Sons of an offering of 37,192,000 interstate Public Service company first mortgage and refunding 6 per cent gold bonds, series A, due Feb. 1, 1948, at 91% and interest,, to yield about 5.70 per

Interstate Public Sérvice Company

First Mortgage and Refunding 6% Gold Bonds, Series A

For detailed information regarding these Bonds, attention is directed to a letter of Mr. Harry Reid, President of the Company, from which the following is summarized:

Service Rendered—The Company serves directly or indirectly 103 Indiana communities with one or more classes of public utility service and operates an interurban line connecting Indianapolis and Louisville. Over 73% of the net income in the twelve months ended April 30, 1923, was derived from electric, gas and miscellaneous sources other than transportation.

Territory—The territory served is well diversified, including many thriving industrial cities, excellent agricultural lands, and the extensive Indiana limestone industry centering about Bedford and Bloomington. The combined population of the communities served is over 220,000.

Security—The Bonds will be secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a mortgage covering as a direct lien all fixed property now owned or hereafter acquired by the Company. The Mortgage will be a first mortgage on electric, gas and water properties, valued by examining engineers at an amount largely in excess of all bonds of this issue to be presently outstanding.

Earnings — Net income for the twelve months ended April 80, 1923, was $1,414,059.06; annual interest requirements on the total mortgage debt to be outstanding, $648,665.

Management — The outstanding Common Stock of the Company is owned or controlled by the Middle West Utilities Company, thus bringing the management under the direction of Mr. Samuel Insull and associates, men who have been notably successful in the development and operation of public utility properties.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

You can buy L. B.'s Pacific grade cards - famous for their smooth edges and accurate size -at a price that will justify you in ordering several months' supply in advance.

Come in today. Let us show you why L. B. Pacific cards are superior at their price; why they wear longer without becoming dog-eared or pulpy at the edges. Let us demonstrate how they save the precious time of busy operators.

Prominent La Grange Citizen Quizzed for Murder of Policeman Frustrating Robbery

BLOODHOUNDS POINT HIM OUT AS SLAYER. Left to right: Chief of police L. G. Matthews of La Grander Daniel Sullivan, George Hinchliffe, prominent citizen to whose house dogs went four times, and Lieut. W. P. R. nedy of the Chicago police. Hinchliffe denies that he killed La Grange policeman.

SOCIAL LEADER WINS DIVORCE. Mrs. Marie Crerar Reid, shown talking with a friend, obtains decree on cruelty charge from Robert Henry Reid.

THEIR INDIGO LAWS FADE OUT. Prosecutor Virgil A. Fitch, prosecutor of Mason county, Mich., and his son, Roscoe Conkling, of Mount case fame, whose blue law plan fails.

NOT BLUE. Police Chief T. J. Barber (seated) and Officer Shenskey, who op-posed Fitch's blue laws.

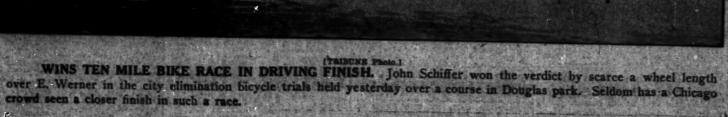

"DON'T WORRY." That's what Edna Witt, missing from 1829 South California avenue, phoned home yesterday.

MONKS SHOW OTHERS HOW TO WORK. Famous Trappist monks are helping the Fascisti leaders interest young Italians in a back to the soil movement. This is the first time the monks have thus appeared in public. LOCKED UP. Robbers shut Mrs. Jennie Hurley in a closet, than ransacked the
